#04 Strategic Ux Psychology (■ HIGH)

Put a photo and brief welcome message near the top of the homepage. Use simple language about how the intake process works. Highlight staff qualifications and patient privacy.

#05 Strategic Ux Psychology (■ HIGH)

Use a brightly colored button for intake and place it in several key spots, starting on the homepage and main menu.

#06 Strategic Content Strategy (■ HIGH)

Write a short description of each major service, use everyday language, and place a 'Learn More' button under each summary.

#07 Strategic Content Strategy (■ HIGH)

Mention service areas on the homepage, and use testimonials or stories from local clients (first name and last initial).

#08 Strategic Conversion Optimization (■ HIGH)

Place a clear 'Take the next step—Intake' button on top of every page, linking directly to the intake form or instructions.

#09 Strategic Conversion Optimization (■ HIGH)

Limit the contact form to only the essentials (name, email, message). Place a phone number and 'text us' option nearby.

#10 Strategic Priority Focus (■ HIGH)

{'category': 'Homepage and intake clarity', 'description': 'Make it easy to reach your main service, start the intake process, and understand your unique qualities.', 'reason': 'People in urgent situations need quick, clear access to help, and are more likely to choose you if they see what makes you different.'}

#11 Strategic Priority Focus (■ HIGH)

{'category': 'Mobile and accessibility', 'description': 'Ensure anyone in the community—including those with only a smartphone—can navigate and use the website.', 'reason': 'Your audience includes people who may only have mobile access, so a mobile-ready site will let more people get help.'}

#12 Strategic Risk Mitigation (■ HIGH)

{'issue': 'Outdated or missing contact information', 'category': 'Operational', 'suggested_action': 'Set up a process to check and update phone numbers, addresses, and forms every few months.'}
